

Diploma of Community Development

The Diploma of Community Development commences in 2017 and combines the principles and practice of Community Development with Biblical studies. The training includes assessment of the needs of a community, project management, rice production, meat chicken production and business skills.

CLTC has had a 400 acre farm with beef, poultry, pigs, rice and vegetable production. The farm provides financial support for the training programmes. CLTC has considerable expertise in agriculture and poultry and has used this expertise in the past to train people to contribute to the development of viable communities in Melanesia and beyond.

The Diploma of Community Development combines various elements of Christian, business and agriculture to train government workers, staff of aid agencies and NGOs, as well as self-supporting pastors and others with an interest in developing the livelihood and welfare of communities.

They typical Diploma of Community Development schedule is as follows:
